

Sinclair Broadcasting's decision to force their stations to air an anti-Kerry documentary days before the election is a clear example of the dangers of media consolidation.

Sinclair uses the public airwaves free of charge, and is obligated by law to serve the public interest. Logically, it makes no sense for the FCC to fine stations for a harmless slip-of-the-tongue expletive while a corporation abusing the free air public air waves to push propaganda and the personal agenda of it's leaders.

Sinclair's actions show why we need to strengthen media ownership rules, not weaken them. They show why the license renewal process needs to involve more than a returned postcard. Thank you.
